

GALLIA BUFFETED BY GALES.

The Overdue Steamship Had One of the Roughest Trips on Record.

Delayed by Broken Machinery and Took a Roundabout Course.

The Cunard line steamship, Gallia, arrived at her dock at the foot of Clark street, at 8:30 o'clock this morning, being six weeks overdue. The passengers, particularly those in the steerage, were rejoiced to set foot on terra firma once again, after experiencing one of the roughest trips in the history of transatlantic travel.

Capt. Hewitson to an "Evening World" reporter gave his account of the voyage on board the vessel this morning. On Jan. 20, when off Mine Head, about thirty miles from Queenstown, the engines stopped at 7:25 A. M. A spindrift of the cylinder had broken. The Gallia was delayed in a heavy sea for nineteen hours while undergoing repairs in her machinery.

On Jan. 20, a hurricane struck the ship with terrific force. Tremendous seas swept the decks and injured several of the crew, but none seriously. The hurricane lasted for three days, during which the vessel labored heavily. A number of the stanchions were carried away, and the amidship port lifeboat was stove in. The engine which sustained the boat was also swept away.

Capt. Hewitson was obliged to steer south 150 miles to avoid the cyclone centre. Gale after gale struck the ship all through the passage. Those on board acted well, however, and there was very little excitement, except among the women passengers.

On the evening of Jan. 31 a large steamer, steering directly towards the Gallia, was sighted. It came so near the Cunarder that a collision seemed inevitable.

Suddenly porting her helm the stranger just succeeded in clearing the Gallia. The watch on deck could not get her name in the darkness.

On Jan. 22 in the afternoon, when eight miles west of Fastnet, a steamer with a steam-colored funnel and black top was seen towing a disabled steamer with red funnel eastward.

On Feb. 1 a German steamer was sighted. It was bound east, showing signs of distress.

The passengers were loud in their praise of Capt. Hewitson this morning. They say he managed the vessel in fine shape in such heavy seas and storms.

There were twenty-six saloon, sixty-six second cabin and eighty-three steerage passengers on board.

SUED FOR A MILLION IN VAIN.
W. J. Marks Defeated in an Action Against Brewery Buyers.

(By Associated Press.)
CHICAGO, Feb. 3.—Judge Winsor has ordered a verdict for the defendants in the suit of W. J. Marks to secure $1,000,000. The defendants were Henry M. Bigelow, of Boston; M. Davis, Hamilton Byrge and Bronson Willet, of London, and the amount sued for was the fifth part of $5,000,000, profits and commissions which Mr. Marks claimed were realized from the sale of several breweries to English capitalists.

The defense claimed that Marks had not acted in good faith, and he alleged that by false representation he was induced to give up his share for a small cash payment.

MALLISTER SAYS SO.

Advice to the 400 About Cutting Off Sons Without Money.

Mr. Ward Mallister has written for "The Sunday World" an article on the subject of young society men who have been cut off with a shilling. He thinks a law should be passed to prevent this.

WARD MALLISTER.

The sons of the rich are so brought up, he says, that they are not remarkably well balanced, and they are not able to cope with men who have been hardened by experience with the world.

Incidentally, Mr. Mallister tells about the right of a rich young man to choose a wife without regard to the wishes of his parents. Some of his remarks will shock the Four Hundred. He pays his respects to Congressman Bryan, of Nebraska, and dips into fashion and finance.

FORGIVENESS AWAITS THEM.

La Paugh Tried to Shoot His Daughter and Son-in-Law.

If Mr. and Mrs. William E. Custer will return to Far Rockaway they will find parental forgiveness awaiting them, although they were welcomed home last evening by an angry father and a revolver.

Mrs. Custer was Miss Lizzie La Paugh, of Far Rockaway. Mr. Custer was a fireman on the Long Island Railroad. The La Paugh family objected to the young people marrying, and as a result they eloped to Long Island City yesterday, where the knot was tied.

The girl's mother became hysterical when she learned of the elopement. The father swore to kill Custer on sight.

Mrs. Walsh, Lizzie's sister, located the young couple in Greenpoint and persuaded them to return for forgiveness. They consented to do so, and telegraphed their intentions. Mrs. La Paugh had recovered somewhat, but the receipt of the telegram sent her into hysterics again.

Mr. La Paugh, who had also decided to forgive the young couple, became excited, and started to meet them at the train. He was a veritable walking arsenal. His two sons overtook him and relieved him of several knives and two revolvers.

When the train arrived Mr. La Paugh rushed at the bride and groom and pointed a revolver at them. Bystanders disarmed him. In the excitement the bride and bridegroom disappeared.

The old gentleman is now ready to forgive them, but they cannot be found.

When baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had children, she gave them Castoria.

He Will Speak To-Night at the Board of Trade Banquet.

The solid business men of New York will have an opportunity of listening to an exposition of tariff reform doctrine from a high and authoritative source this evening when the members of the Board of Trade and Transportation meet at the Hotel Waldorf for their annual banquet.

The star speaker of the evening will be Congressman William L. Wilson, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, who comes up from Washington out of the thick of the fight to tell the merchants of New York some of his "experiences as a tariff reformer."

Other speakers on the list are ex-Minister Charles Emory Smith, whose subject is "The Trade of Statehood and the Statesmanship of Trade," Prof. Richard Watson Gilder, "Civil Patriotism," Edward Higginson, "The Forefathers of Trade and Transportation in New York," Congressman Joseph C. Hendrix, "Politics as Affecting Business," and Congressman J. R. Whiting, "How Can We Best Further Our Industries?"
